Introduction to DiSC® and Group Culture

Everything DiSC® Group Culture Report

Just as individuals have unique styles, groups also tend to develop their own styles or cultures. This culture is an informal combination of behaviors, values, and attitudes that most people in the group take for granted.

Put in the simplest terms, group culture is “the way we do things.”

Although not everybody agrees with or flows with the culture, most group members feel the pressure that a culture exerts to act in a certain way. DiSC® does not address all elements of culture, but it helps you understand many important priorities, needs, goals, fears, emotions, and behaviors within your culture.

Why is group culture important?

Group culture has a large impact on the behavior, attitudes, and satisfaction of each group member. People who fit into the culture often feel right at home in the group. But for other people, the culture leads them to feel like strangers in a strange land. The environment makes them uncomfortable.

Culture also has implications for the group as a whole. It affects such things as the pace at which work gets done, how outsiders are treated, the attention paid to details, or risks that the group takes. These in turn influence the success of the group in meeting its goals.

Where does group culture come from?

Group culture is not simply the average of all the people in the group. A number of different factors determine group culture, such as:

- The style of the group leaders
- The most pronounced styles within the group
- The type of work the group does
- The historical culture of the group
- The cohesion or tension within the group
- The goals and mission of the group

These are just some of the factors that help shape group culture. Understanding the origins of your culture may be important if you hope to change it.

Your DiSC® Culture

Your DiSC® Culture

When assessing your group’s culture, you also may want to think about the things that your group values the most. What types of behaviors does it reward? What does it encourage? The qualities and behaviors that your group values often reflect the makeup of the group members. The graph below shows what percentage of your group has each DiSC® style as their primary style, and the priorities that correspond to each of these group styles.

D	I	S	C
Results	Enthusiasm	Support	Accuracy
Action	Action	Stability	Stability
Challenge	Collaboration	Collaboration	Challenge

The following pages describe each of the four DiSC cultures. Read through these descriptions and decide which ones, if any, describe your group as a whole. Some groups find that a blend of two DiSC styles describes their culture best. On the other hand, some groups may find that none of the DiSC styles fully describes their culture. Or even beyond this, some groups find important subgroups that each have their own DiSC culture.

The i Culture

Everything DiSC® Group Culture Report

The percentage of your group members (18%) whose dots fall in the i region is slightly lower than the average group taking this profile (26%). The hallmarks of an i culture are an energetic atmosphere, an optimistic approach, and plenty of time spent in meetings or socializing. This culture values effective teamwork and creative approaches to problems. Trust is given to those who are open and expressive. People who excel in this setting tend to be charismatic individuals with keen social skills. However, those who aren't as people-oriented may be frustrated with the emphasis on group activities and social niceties. In addition, poor planning and low tolerance for routine tasks may sometimes prevent such a culture from actually implementing any bold ideas.

The i Culture Rewards:

Creativity
Enthusiasm
Optimism
Collaboration
Passion

The i Culture Criticizes:

Rulemaking
Caution
Overanalysis
Introversion
Insensitivity

Advantages of the i Culture:

Fosters creativity through high energy
Provides a fun and optimistic atmosphere
Encourages collective brainstorming
Promotes frequent informal communication
Excels at promoting ideas

Exhibits spotty planning

Issues to Consider

If you have an i culture, your group may want to think about the following questions:

- What are the advantages and drawbacks of the i culture for your group?
- How does the i culture support or inhibit the success of your group?
- Does your group waste too much time socializing?
- Is your group as organized and efficient as it needs to be?
- Does your group follow through on ideas and innovations?

Working in the i Culture

Everything DiSC® Group Culture Report

The i culture offers benefits and challenges for people with each of the four DiSC® styles.

People in the D Region (24% of Your Group)

People in the D region probably appreciate the fast pace and exciting developments that this culture encourages. Their eagerness to tackle new challenges keeps the cycle of creativity moving, which inspires their colleagues and benefits the organization. However, they may grow impatient with prolonged meetings, and the culture's emphasis on people's feelings may strike them as unnecessary or even counterproductive.

People in the i Region (18% of Your Group)

People in the i region may find no better fit than this culture. They tend to thrive on energetic approaches and constant interaction with peers, both of which are in abundance in this environment. This culture's priorities suit these energetic people to such a high degree that their natural zeal may propel the organization forward. But flaws, such as disorganization and spotty planning, can be magnified when people in the i region are active in this setting.

People in the S Region (18% of Your Group)

People in the S region are likely to respond well to the warmth and collaboration of this culture. And although they may not be the most vocal in group settings, they still like the fact that social graces are appreciated in this environment. They tend to focus on steady performance and avoid calling attention to themselves, which allows the organization to function more effectively. Still, the speed of change in this culture may be too much for them sometimes, and their need for concrete direction is likely to go unmet.

People in the C Region (41% of Your Group)

People in the C region may gain satisfaction in this culture by embracing the value of their work. In fact, their efforts are essential to the organization's structure, because they're likely to maintain order in an otherwise frantic environment. Although they may be seen as cynical, they undertake the research, analysis, and detail-oriented tasks that others avoid. However, they may become annoyed at the lack of clear guidelines and rules in this culture. They also may resent the pressure to be extroverted and optimistic.

Issues to Consider

If you have an i culture, your group may want to consider the following questions:

- How do people who aren't in the i region feel about this culture? What are their frustrations and challenges?
- How does the group listen to those in the other regions?
- How do people in the i region respond to those who don't share their style?
- How open is your culture to the D, S, and C styles? How do they bring balance to your group?
 - o Do people in the D region feel that too much time is wasted socializing?
 - o Do people in the S region feel like they have enough structure and stability?
 - o Do people in the C region feel that potential problems are ignored and analysis is undervalued?

The S Culture

Everything DiSC® Group Culture Report

The percentage of your group members (18%) whose dots fall in the S region is slightly lower than the average group taking this online profile (24%). The hallmarks of an S culture are stability, predictability, and friendliness. This culture values strong teamwork and a manageable work-life balance. Trust is given to those who are sincere and considerate. People who thrive in this setting tend to avoid conflict and include everyone in the group's victories. People in this culture naturally support each other and rely on a systematic approach to work. However, such a culture may lag in innovation or in its willingness to take on bold challenges.

The S Culture Rewards:

Cooperation
Loyalty
Humility
Thoughtfulness
Team focus

The S Culture Criticizes:

Aggressiveness
Pushiness
Disruptiveness
Nonconformity
Sudden change

Advantages of the S Culture:

Commits to getting the job done right
Provides a relaxed atmosphere
Works toward dependable and reliable results
Promotes feelings of comfort and security
Cultivates work-life balance
Encourages a strong sense of duty
Allows a high level of teamwork
Fosters polite, tactful behavior

Drawbacks of the S Culture:

Fails to challenge ideas
Lacks a competitive edge
Avoids tough decisions to spare feelings
Inhibits change and stifles innovation
Avoids giving even constructive criticism
Struggles with indecisiveness
Discourages strong individual accomplishment
Allows resentment to brew beneath the surface

Issues to Consider

If you have an S culture, your group may want to think about the following questions:

What are the advantages and drawbacks of the S culture for your group?

- How does the S culture support and inhibit the success of your group?
- Does your group take enough risks? Does it avoid changes even when they are needed?
- Does the group avoid making necessary but tough decisions just because they might upset others?
- Do people have enough incentive to push themselves for more extraordinary results?

Working in the S Culture

Everything DiSC® Group Culture Report

The S Culture

The S culture offers benefits and challenges for people with each of the four DiSC® styles.

People in the D Region (24% of Your Group)

People in the D region strive to get results in this culture. Their preference for action may cause them to make bold decisions and take daring risks. Such adventurous behavior can benefit the organization, which otherwise may struggle to move forward decisively. However, their assertive behavior may be seen as rude or pushy. People in the D region, on the other hand, may feel that the environment is too “touchy-feely.” Further, the calm, orderly culture often seems dull to them, and they may look elsewhere for challenges.

People in the i Region (18% of Your Group)

People in the i region tend to supply much of the excitement in this culture. They can bring enthusiasm to projects and coordinate the social activities that bond colleagues and build a sense of community. Others, however, may get frustrated that they aren't as organized and reliable in their habits as the culture expects. At the same time, people in the i region are likely to become bored at the laidback atmosphere that this culture encourages.

People in the S Region (18% of Your Group)

People in the S region tend to appreciate the comforting routine that this culture provides. They're likely to respond well to the security of the environment, and they may look forward to the collaboration that is a large part of this culture. The organization can come to depend upon their loyalty and follow-through. However, they may not be challenged to improve their performance, accept new responsibilities, take chances, or make major changes.

People in the C Region (41% of Your Group)

People in the C region tend to appreciate the fact that precision and analytical skills are respected in this culture. They seldom feel pressure to rush through projects in this environment, and they're likely to appreciate its methodical approach. They get the opportunity to benefit the organization by ensuring refined and accurate outcomes. However, they may be seen as too cold. People in the C region, in turn, may feel that the group is too sensitive and accommodating when making decisions.

Issues to Consider

If you have an S culture, your group may want to consider the following questions:

- How do people who aren't in the S region feel about this culture? What are their frustrations and challenges?
- How does the group listen to those in the other regions?
- How do people in the S region respond to those who don't share their style?
- How open is your culture to the D, i, and C styles? How do they bring balance to your group?
 - o Do people in the D region feel that the group moves too slowly and that people are too sensitive?
 - o Do people in the i region feel like they have enough excitement?
 - o Do people in the C region feel that the group makes decisions based on people's feelings rather than facts?
